"THE LANCE"

My life has been a tapestry of rich and royal hue,
An everlasting vision of the everchanging view.

Carole King

The tapestry of our lives is shaped day by day from the individual moments that we experience. During the time we spend at Fenwick we will have added to, and sometimes changed, the color and texture of our lives. In return, we as individuals contribute to the tapestry of Fenwick as a whole. All our talents and ideas are intertwined to create a school unlike any other. Each member of the Fenwick community is important, contributing in some way to the rest. Constant growth will change the picture and it will grow as we do.

Our piece of the tapestry is reflected in the following pages . . .

STUDENT LIFE

Fenwick is by no means the perfect place and it would be wrong to say that everyone gets along all the time. Just about everywhere you go there will be a few people who rub you the wrong way. A variety of life-styles are represented here—some that you personally cannot accept—but the unique thing at Fenwick is that you're not condemned for your individuality.

There is value to being exposed to a number of ways of thinking. The world is made up of very different people. There is no way you can ever change them to fit your approval. In going to Fenwick, you see a small segment of the world, and come to the realization that you have to adjust your ways to fit in.

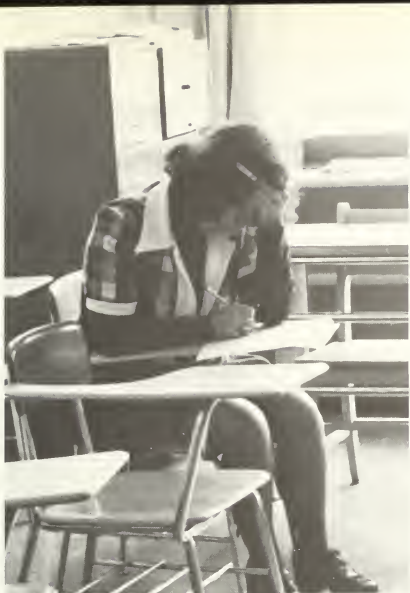

At any time of day, you can always find friendly faces roaming about the school. Kids manage to keep themselves occupied with sports, clubs, meetings, and plain "bumming" around. Sometimes things just don't click, and you end up walking around in a daze. Then again, there are always the rowdies in the corridors, without whom the Fenwick atmosphere would not be complete. Add all the gossip, giggles, activities, frustrations, and friendliness and you get life at Fenwick.

Fenwick is very susceptible to moods. When things are going well, the whole school seems to vibrate with a good feeling. On a bad day the heavy atmosphere surrounds you. This empathy seems to be a Fenwick trait. The moods reflect the colors of the day, the feelings of the people, and the spirit of the school.

Our class has come a long way in four years. As freshmen we felt very proud and independent. The class then was more divided. Gradually we came to realize that we needed each other and by working together, we could really make things happen. It's something I hope every class can learn.

Practically my whole life revolves around this place. The education that I've received here is something to be valued. But, perhaps more important than that is what I have learned about life in general. I experienced a lot in four years at Fenwick and I'm not saying that it's all been good—but even the bad things matter. I love this place and I really hate to leave. But when I do leave I'll take a lot with me and know that I've made my mark on this school too.

My four years at Fenwick can best be summed up as a growing experience. The friends I've made, both teachers and students, have helped me become a more secure person both socially and academically. Sure I have my ups and downs just like I would anywhere else, but the friendliness, concern, and open-mindedness I've found here always seem to make the hopeless hopeful, and the good times twice as good!

Most of my four years at Fenwick we looked ahead to college and jobs. Much of what we did was in preparation for the future. Now, after being accepted to college, the pressures are off and there is time to look back. I realize it is necessary to think of the future, but I wish we had lived more for the moment. One misses alot by living in the future.

The faculty at Fenwick is a group of diverse individuals—all with their own teaching methods and educational philosophies. The important thing to remember is what they have given to each of us. It is not only the knowledge and skills that we have learned for which we should be grateful, but also the values, ideas, and experiences that they have passed on to us. Twenty years from now maybe we will not be able to remember that poem or recall the geometric theorems, but the person that each one of us will be will have been affected in some way by our encounters with the teachers here.

There is something mysterious about junior year — no one seems to know where they are or where they are going. It is a year filled with confusion; the pressure of actually "growing up" is immense. After three shaky years, juniors finally know their friends — now they are faced with knowing themselves.

Sophomore year is an in-between time. We are not the oldest class in the school, yet we are not the youngest either. This year we can really feel a part of the school and the spirit that surrounds it. We are able to give of ourselves more freely now as our circle of friends has expanded and we are getting to know each other a little bit better. Mainly it is the people that make the sophomore class great — people with enthusiasm and spirit.

When I first came to Fenwick in the fall of '74, I felt like a stranger — lost and confused. Now that I have been here a while, I have found new friends and settled in to the mood of things. I can honestly say that this school has done a lot for me — I'm not a stranger anymore.

OPERATION CHARLEY

For those who travelled to St. Charles Orphanage that cold, rainy night, no words could explain the feeling of warmth and happiness that came from giving of themselves. For those who could not experience the joy and love radiating from that Christmas party, we offer these pictures.

DRAMA CLUB

This year's Drama Club has worked with dedication toward their May production of "Roar of the Greasepaint, Smell of the Crowd". The performers, directors, and the "behind-the-scenes" people—set crew, costumes, lighting, make-up, and publicity—spend many hours combining their talents in preparation for that one weekend when their efforts will be rewarded.

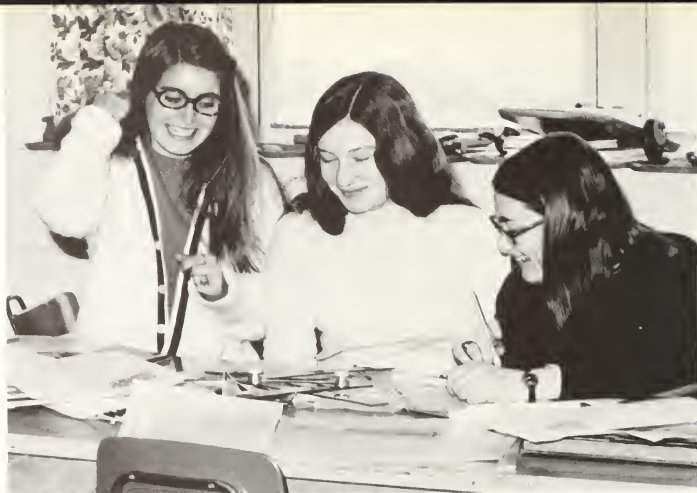

APOSTOLIC SERVICE

Fenwick's Apostolic Service program offers students the opportunity to help out in the community. Volunteering in hospitals, tutoring pre-schoolers, teaching phys-ed, and working with the handicapped all serve to broaden the experiences of the students taking part.

To all those who made this yearbook possible,

Thank you

A wondrous woven magic in bits of "brown"
and gold,
A tapestry to feel and see, impossible to hold.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion, and the number of people aged 65 years and over has increased from 0.2 billion to 0.4 billion (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of the young and the old. The United Nations (1999) has identified the need to address the needs of the young and the old as one of the eight Millennium Development Goals. The United Nations (1999) has also identified the need to address the needs of the young and the old as one of the eight Millennium Development Goals.
